morimoto sake collection

chef morimoto has developed a signature portfolio of sakes, custom-brewed to his exacting standards. morimoto sake is crafted by the historic fukumitsuya brewery, established in 1625 in the town of kanazawa. each taste conjures both centuries of tradition and the chef's modern spirit of innovation. morimoto sakes display layers of flavor so pure they require no translation, reflecting both the depth and finesse of the chef's dynamic cuisine.

morimoto premium sake

pristine rice and water are the raw materials from which premium sake is made. in order to brew fine sake, one must begin with only the best rice and an impeccable water source. impurities at the surface must first be polished away, revealing the pure starch at the heart of each grain of rice.

for premium sake, at least 30% of the outside surface of the rice grains must be milled away. further milling yields more purity and refinement, producing three grades of premium sake, each with their own minimum milling requirement: junmai at 30%, ginjo at 40%, and daijingo at 50%. all are best served chilled.

morimoto 'junmai'

subtle aromas of honeyed walnuts with a soft sweet finish

10 oz. carafe 29. 720ml 68. 1.8 liter 147.

morimoto 'ginjo'

caramelized pear aromas with a ripe stone fruit finish

10 oz. carafe 34. 720ml 94. 1.8 liter 185.

morimoto 'daiginjo'

10 oz. carafe 45. 720ml 158. 1.8 liter 260.

morimoto aged sake

aged sake, or koshu, is a long lost style enjoying a renaissance in japan. koshu was once enjoyed by the royalty and elite of the 13th century kamakura era. however, aged sake fell out of favor during the 19th century edo era, when a heavy tax was levied on brewers.

this tax stifled interest in crafting this luxurious sake for generations, and was lifted only fifty years ago. most sake is meant to be consumed young, generally within a year of release. only hand-crafted sakes of the highest quality can survive the test of time and maintain grace and finesse. full-bodied, nutty, and slightly sweet, these sakes pair beautifully with rich, flavorful dishes and decadent desserts. morimoto's aged sakes reflect the chef's vision of the future and deep respect for the distant past.

morimoto '5 year'

toasty honey-graham aromas with a sweet chili pepper finish

2 oz. glass 23. bottle (300ml) 101.

morimoto '10 year'

morimoto '1972'
